

ONCE UPON A TIME LONG,
LONG AGO

LIVED A CAPTIVATED ORPHAN
IN THE LAND OF ABANDONMENT

*Is it Possible Now
That a self-made woman can feel like an orphan sometimes.*

*You have been climbing the cliffs edge
for a very long time,
hoping to be seen;
hoping to find refuge
from the ice-lands of abandonment and betrayal.*

Is it Possible Now?

Perhaps through all of your achievements and successes there remains a part of you that still feels orphaned.

Through the years, there was no particular person you could count on for supportive mentorship.

The emotional pain felt excruciating especially when the very person you admired the most, and needed the most did not acknowledge you as you strove your achievements.

These are covert transgressions clandestinely positioned against you.

Without foundational encouragement you sought ways in which to succeed. your way through discouraging, and extracting voices sabotaging you.

Perhaps now you can weep with tears of self-compassion as a way to connect in tender empathy to your own needs.

Now might be the appointed time to secure a shelter through the dark night of your soul knowing someday that your energy will return as surely as the sun rises in the East.

The journey has been arduous.

As you champion your courage, to attain your goal, inches will turn into miles, in the healing of your soul.

Is That Possible Now?

